Director's Message

The Center for Applied Research on Substance Use and Health Disparities (ARSH) celebrated many accomplishments in 2015. ARSH continues to be a leader in sponsored research at Nova Southeastern University. Our international research on prescription drug diversion; our local, national and international drug epidemiology studies; and our ongoing South Florida-based research among vulnerable populations yielded more than 20 publications this year, as well as numerous scientific presentations at local, national, and international conferences. We look forward to the fruition of a number of new initiatives in 2016, including the potential expansion of our prescription drug diversion studies to all of Canada.

The year also marked a number of new research collaborations, including projects and proposals with researchers from institutions across the U.S. and internationally. These include ongoing and expanded initiatives in China and Israel, as well as new efforts to address substance abuse and HIV prevention among adolescents and young adults.

We are especially proud of the successes of our early investigators in 2015. Associate Director Mance Buttram was awarded the NSU President's Research and Faculty Development Award to study patterns of misuse and diversion of medications prescribed for pre-exposure prophylaxis to prevent HIV infection. Maria Levi-Minzi was named Evaluator for a SAMHSA grant that aims to assist young men who have sex with men in linking to HIV testing and treatment resources. Congratulations!

We are pleased to announce the formalization of our ongoing collaborations with newly designated Affiliate Faculty in the College of Arts, Humanities and Social Sciences. Dr. Hilary Surratt, former Co-Director of ARSH, has relocated and is now with the Center for Health Services Research in the College of Medicine at the University of Kentucky. Dr. Maria Pagano, Associate Professor at Case Western Reserve University, serves as Co-investigator and biostatistician on several ARSH projects.

The work we do requires a team effort. We wish to thank all of our research staff, external collaborators, and the NSU community for your vision, commitments and talents. We share ARSH's successful year with all of you.

Steven P. Kurtz
Director

Mission Statement

The principal mission of the Center for Applied Research on Substance Use and Health Disparities (ARSH) is the production, dissemination, and utilization of scientific knowledge in the areas of substance abuse, health risk behaviors, and health disparities among vulnerable populations. Areas of special interest include:

- The etiology, patterns and consequences, and prevention and treatment of drug and alcohol abuse;
- The epidemiology of HIV/AIDS and other sexually transmitted infections, and the prevention of such infections among highly vulnerable populations;
- The prevalence and patterns of health disparities among affected subpopulations, and the development and testing of new approaches to intervention.

ARSH is located within the Department of Justice and Human Services in the College of Arts, Humanities and Social Sciences. The Center is headed by Dr. Steven P. Kurtz (Ph.D. in Sociology from Florida International University). In addition to the Miami research office, ARSH maintains a field office that houses the day-to-day operations of extramurally funded grants.
